Yeh understand, yet within writing that by chance i came up with that ide based in poorer countries to begin with; then all funding would be invest too, not in our banks.
Money is currency and so flows or at least use to from one place to the r

So by allowing poorer people to work in their own charities, we also give finance that village or place out of poverty and into equality.

Else do you see if a rich person goes and helps a poor village whom hav volunteer has gone, where is the money? Where is the care? It went wher yes we can build a road and a well for them, yet without constant fundin maintain it, with out said volunteers?

Everyone needs independence and acceptance of their own ability to surv victimization of people only leaves them feeling more helpless then they

So let put the tools and money they need in their own hands and then all

Like you say assessments of said charities are needed, yet when our own mess of the Tsunami, were funding didn't get to where it was needed.
Do you think their own people would have let the money not get to where can see first hand where and what it is needed on and how to best spend

So when a charity is trying to help finance something, how many times w situation, as well as the people who live there??

Not many..

Do you see what this is getting at, that by giving the money to them, we to them, yet when we give to our self's, we are giving to our self's.

Like church roofs, does collection box money go to helping the poor? No church roof?
Same principle....So when will the currency flow?
When we let it and I don't believe we are doing purposely in many cases, flow of money to make more money.

You realize also if you take English currency to a poor country, it is wor change that again and double it etc....you make a lot of money, if you ha
