History:

K'ung Fu Tzu (commonly pronounced Confucius in English) was born in 551 BC in modern day Shantung Province. He lived during the Chou dynasty, and taught about the importance of filial piety. Later in life, he wandered through many states of China, giving advice to various rulers. He accumulated a small band of students during this time. The last years of his life were spent in Lu, where he devoted himself to teaching.

His writings deal primarily with individual morality and ethics, and the proper way to govern a state. He believed that the power of the ruler should be based on moral example rather than force.

In China, and some other areas in Asia, the social ethics and moral teachings of Confucianism have been blended with the Taoist communion with nature and Buddhist concepts of compassion. These three traditions are often complementary, peacefully co-existent and ecumenical religions.

There are approximately 6 million Confucians in the world. About 26,000 live in the United States. Almost all of the remainder are found throughout China and the rest of Asia.

Beliefs:

Confucian ethical teachings include the following values:

Li: includes ritual, propriety, etiquette, etc.

Hsiao: love within the family: love of parents for their children and of children for their parents.

Yi: righteousness

Xin: honesty and trustworthiness

Jen: benevolence, humaneness towards others; the highest Confucian virtue.

Chung: loyalty to the state, etc.

Practices:

Confucianism does not contain all of the elements of some other religions. It is primarily an ethical system to which rituals at important times during the year are added.

Since the time of the Han dynasty (206 CE) four life passages have been observed by Confucian tradition:

birth: The T'ai-shen (spirit of the fetus) protects the expectant woman and who harasses the mother to be. A special procedure is followed when the mother is given a special diet and is allowed rest for a month after birth. The origin supplies all the items required by the baby on the first, fourth and anniversary of the birth.

reaching maturity: This life passage is no longer being celebrated, except it takes the form of a group meal in which the young adult is served chicken.

marriage: This is performed in six stages: Proposal: the couple exchange year, month, day and hour of each of their births. If any unpropitious event occurs, the bride-to-be's family during the next three days, then the woman is believed to be pregnant.

Engagement: after the wedding day is chosen, the bride announces the wedding date and sends a gift of cookies made in the shape of the moon.

Dowry: This is carried to the groom's home in a solemn procession. The dowry consists of gifts sent by the bride's parents to the groom's parents. Gifts sent by the bride to the groom, equal to those sent to her.

Procession: The groom visits the bride's home and brings her back to his home.

Marriage and Reception: The couple recite their vows, toast each other and center stage at a banquet.

Morning after: The bride serves breakfast to the groom's parents, who then leave.

death: At death, the relatives cry out aloud to inform the neighbors. The deceased is washed and dressed in simple clothing. Friends and family bring incense and money to offset the cost of the funeral. Food and signs of the deceased are placed into the coffin. A Buddhist or Taoist priest (or even a layman) performs the burial ritual. Friends and family follow the coffin to the cemetery where it is buried. A red branch which symbolizes the soul of the person who has died. The latter is placed on an altar where it is used to "install" the spirit of the deceased. Liturgies are held on the 49th day after the burial and on the first and third anniversaries of the death.
