Buddha (Discernment) and Yeshua (Salvation) both taught similarly; it is the religions that were created around them that taught differently.

Both taught selflessness, to seek enlightenment, that Works/Karma lead to salvation, that none attachment leads to the Divine, to meditate, give up wealth, to work toward Oneness as the ultimate goal.

There is no self or to hate the self (psyche). Live a life serving others. They both use the word heart contextually to mean soul. Both teach that enlightenment is within us. Both teach to meditate on the infinite consciousness. Both break down the previous religious misunderstandings, and ask people to question. They both taught the golden rule, 'do unto others as you wish done unto you'. Both taught not to strike back those who strike you. Not to judge. Love your enemies. Overcome hate with love. More blessed to give than to receive. Avoid being religious for show. Both taught the Way (Dharma). etc...
