To everyone who works to revive the Mandaic language

Preface

The Mandaic language is a pure branch of the Eastern Aramaic, which is written in a special alphabet. In recent times, it is merely kept for the liturgical use due to the influence of other languages which Mandaeans use in their daily life. So they lost the chance of a regular education of their mother tongue, which is now classified as an endangered language. That is why there is a great need for instructional books and dictionaries. This dictionary, which I named “Nhura: light”, should help the Mandaeans who want to learn Mandaic, also the interested people who want to study it.

There have already been good efforts in this field through the basic work of Theodor Noeldeke in his book “Mandäische Grammatik”, Mark Lidzbarski who translated three books including Mandaean’s main book “Ginza Rabba”, and thereupon the work of E. S. Drower. She is well known for her translations of many scriptures, also for publishing the “Mandaic dictionary” in collaboration with R. Macuch, who was also specialized in the classic and modern Mandaic. Although their dictionary has become a basic work for scholars, there is nowadays an increasing necessity for a dictionary that translates Mandaic vocabularies into Arabic, English and vice-versa.

Basically, I depended on the Mandaic Dictionary of Drower & Macuch, but I revised the vocabularies and added a lot of words and their derivatives according to a deep analysis of Mandaean’s published literal heritage.

In order to include this book the Mandaic words – rather than the common use of transliterating them into Hebrew, Syriac or Latin - I created a Mandaic font and fed it to the computer.

The words are transliterated according to their pronunciation in Mandaic. This should explain the pronunciation of the words, especially when the letters (a, u, i) may sometimes occur as vowel marks; these are written in italics (a, u, i). In Mandaic, many nouns are usually pluralized by adding the letters (ia) at the end of the word, but the letter (a) is mute. For a correct pronunciation, the pluralized nouns were written without the letter (a) at the end.

Some words may have their letters stressed, such as (ܘܥܠܘܗܝܝ Hayyi), so they were transliterated in a readable manner to be alike the original pronunciation.

Furthermore, the verbs are written in bold letters. They usually consist of three consonants, where sometimes the last two consonants are repeated, e.g. “KLL”. I used to put an (e) between these letters to help the reader pronouncing them correctly, for example kl: klēl, skk: skēk, qtt: qtēt.

A lot of Mandaic vocabularies contain two following consonants; therefore, Mandaeans use the unwritten vowel mark (i) at the beginning of the word. That is why I put (i) and sometimes a small (e) before such words. For the letter (ⲉ) which is to pronounce as (e) or (ع ء) in Arabic, I used (e) at the beginning of the English transliteration.

In the beginning of this book, the reader may have a look at the opening glorification of the “Ginza Rabba”, which represents an example of a Mandaic text and its translation.

Since letters are sacred for the Mandaeans, each section in this dictionary starts with a text from the hymn of letters in the “Ginza Rabba”.

Additionally, there is a list of ritual terms accompanied with explanatory illustrations.

Much time and effort were invested in the arrangement and proofing of this dictionary to assure its accuracy.

Just as Ganzibra Najem helped Lady Drower to compile her dictionary, so did his grandson Rabby Rafid with me. I have to thank him for his proofreading and valuable comments. I also want to thank my son Usama for his support.

I hope that I have done beneficial work for the Mandaeism and the Mandaeans and for all who are concerned with their language.

Since perfection belongs to God (Hayyi) alone, I invoke Him to forgive my mistakes, and any faults.

Praised be my Lord, master of all the worlds, with a pure heart!

Praised are You! Blessed, praised, glorified, honored and confirmed, the God, the Great, and the High. Be praised the lofty King of Light. The true God, whose power is endless and infinite. The pure brilliance and the great light never end. The compassionate, the forgiver, the compassionate, the merciful, and the redeemer of all believers, and the conformer of all righteous. The almighty, the wise, the all-knowing, the all-seeing, the distinguished, the ruler with dominion over every thing, the master of the upper, middle and lower worlds of light. He is the great countenance of glory, Who is unseen and unbounded. He has no partner in His dominion and no rival for His scepter. Whosoever depend on Him will not come to disgrace, whosoever sincerely glorifies His name will not fall from His grace, and whosoever trusts Him with confidence will not abase himself.

He is the supreme lord of all rulers. Nothing that did not come from Him has ever existed, and nothing that does not come from Him ever will alphabet. The alphabet is formally closed with this letter where the Mandaic faith believes that every thing has to return to its first beginning. As the alphabet started with the letter

 (a) so it has to be ended with the same letter. It is supposed to have 24 letters.
