My past posts are only a reflection of the old me. I have since gone through a process of re-invention... so you may find many inconsistencies and contradictions between my old thinking and understanding... just as in a few months this will also be a reflection of a more informed, less enlightened me :) ... read my posts... and notice the differences. It makes me proud. And yes Suzy... maybe saying re-invent oneself was a bit of a stretch, flex, and add on... is in some sense, a new person... I think both are true. In science... I am talking about astronomy. And once the discoveries are made (their way), people will need to have something to go to. Someone, or something, that changes. Unless these changes are so extremely gradual, that we wait for them to slowly die out so that we are born into the new ideas over time. There's a panic factor involved though. I really appreciate your lengthy responses. They are so smooth, it's like a cool wind on the mind. It's soothing to read, no matter how long. Thank you for your time. You're such a kind person :)
