SYDNEY, Australia (AP) - New Zealand is not for sale, despite somebody trying to offload the nation of four million to the highest online bidder.

With a starting offer of just one cent, brisk bidding for the prime chunk of land quickly boosted the price to 3,000 Australian dollars before eBay pulled it out of the week. "Clearly New Zealand is not for sale," eBay Australia spokesman David Dwyer told the New Zealand Press Association, adding that 22 bids had been made before the auction ended. "It is mostly household items we have for sale, but there are the occasional items added. "We have a look at them and if they are OK we leave them, but if they are sold, we take them off."

The trader has not been named, but apparently was unimpressed with the price for the sell.

The rivalry between the two countries is intense and in his advertisement Dwyer had "very ordinary weather."
