Marriage, does not always equal love...

Zanda I give you this.

Why do couples marry?
They marry to have the grand wedding of all time.
They marry because everyone else is doing it.
They marry for security.
Society prefers married couples to procreate over single women bearing and frown upon.
(interesting...wake up! more than 50% of these very same women will one more often now single dad's are stepping into the role as the feminine ro in both men and women.) *Delusional thinking here to think a piece of pa unit.
Combined income means a bigger house, better cars, more materialism, m govenment! WOW...the wonder of the world I know it as the American way
It makes the family happy to celebrate!
Marry for love you say...the Prince and the Princess, oh I still hold on to has never found one such as me. I have tried time and again.
Marry for company, don't want to be loney, sick and afraid.
Marry for convenience.
Marry for socialization and status, go from one social class to another in signing of a marriage document.
Marry to possess and to grasp and to own and to claim another, to ensur claim.
Marry to honor and cherish...what did this ever mean?
Rarely do we ever see marry until death do us part even written in marria to be a wedding cordinator too... they are taking it out of lots of ceremo is known most marriages won't last.
Marry and find jealousy, unrealistic expectations, one partner now desiri they still claim love...is this what Zanda's is referring too? Sickening it farther from true love.

What did I leave out...please add to my list...

One day the idea of marriage will end. The need for that piece of paper f benefits, death benefits and a joint mortgage will be gone. Lawyers wake changing! This new generation has had enough of the kind of love of thei Churches be warned a new shift in consciousness is awakening!

More to follow...

Love and Light,
Suzyq
