We are, no doubt, a contributing factor. It is difficult to know or destinguish, beyond that, natural processes from human interven

I've heard claims that because of increased carbon dioxide and forestry, that oxygen levels have decreased 10 percent over the last 40 years. 25 Percent was once the norm. Now, in some cities, single digits have been recorded. So yes,

I think we've had something to do with it.
