After saying this the other day and then questioning my self, if it is right more I think it to be correct that love is only proved by example and not You see you can buy someone flowers as you cheated on them and so buy So that is an action yet the example is not a good one.

You can give your children big gifts, yet then spend no time with them, s love or is the action all they are getting?

Will carry on when I can think of some more....
