Since many Xoops sites using Smarty contain many files inside Cache and have sub-directories makes more sense to be switched on not off as it is. This allows things like links and Tags which have huge file list for cache separately and thus making a more flick through page approach as current when the files cached becomes to large. same applies on template_c which Sub-directories for faster referencing of where the templates are. Option is present in class/templates.php set the option to true instead of false, clear template_c as it isn't automatic property page, so cache is cleared automatically and then Xoops will assist making a faster retrieval time on large scale sites.

Please also be aware that we use the latest copy of Smarty and am unsure own one is, yet all should be the same more or less.
