The Child Of God

By Jacqueline Amos

Oh thy humble child of God, your love glows within your smile. The soft laughter you bring others, without asking for anything in return, there are names of our God, the pure and the meek is the symbol of God's blessed children who claim to be the chosen one, the given and the humble shall always be blessed by God.

The child comes with the spoken words, the child who speaks in a soft tone for the earth, forsaken self, feeling the pain of its brother, even when he has scars that he wears upon his back, the labor that he gives free of charge. Creation is a tool, but the behavior is the actions that represents the child who visits with care, the hungry man who he feeds, from his table with one slice.

The tears that he cries for the earth, the prayers he sings, not for his sake but for the child of God. Humanity the service to God, the peace maker who fights with love, his daily bread, the spoken words of love, the child who never comes to a child.
