David,

May I presume...what book are you reading these ideas from?

I haven't read such things and would like to research them myself.

While lower vibrational life forms do have electrical fields, I find it difficult for a small amount of algae could supply energy sufficiently.

I've been known to be wrong before and I am always open to new insights. I will look at the data and the experiments more thoroughly. Would you please provide a reference.

None of my current energy or tree books contain such information.

Tree climber by nature! Hmmm...what a buzz!

Love and Light,
