History:

Asatru is frequently regarded as one of the Neopagan family of religions. Celtic Druidism, and re-creations of Egyptian, Greek, Roman, and other ancient religions. However, many Asatruers prefer the term "Heathen" to "Neopagan" and look at it "not just a branch on the Neopagan tree" but as a separate tree. Unlike many other religions, which evolved into many different traditions, the reconstruction of Asatru has been based on historical record; it has been maintained as closely as possible to the original Norse people.

Some sources state that Asatru or Ásatrú is an Icelandic word, derived from Asa and Setro. Others state that it is a Norse word. It was "first seen in 1885 in "Fjallkonan". The next recorded instance was in "Heiðinn siður á Íslandi" (Reykjavík, 1945)." The title means "Heathen traditions in Iceland."

In Scandinavia the religion is called Forn Siðr (which means the Ancient custom), Nordisk sed (Nordic custom), or Hedensk sed (Pagan custom). It is lost in antiquity. At its peak, it covered all of Northern Europe. In 1000 CE, the last Norse culture to convert to Christianity. Their prime motivation was ruled by a Pagan king until 1085 CE.

Icelandic poet Gothi Sveinbjorn Beinteinsson promoted government recognition of Asatru as a legitimate religion; this status was granted in 1972. Since the early 1970s, there has been a period of rapid growth in the former Norse countries, in Europe and North America.

It is not unknown for otherwise decent religions to become corrupted by anti-semitic, and homophobic beliefs. For example, the Christian Identity movement is a distortion of the Christian religion which has adsorbed such beliefs. During the early 20th century, the National Socialist Party in Germany under Adolf Hitler attempted to pervert the religion onto the Nazi racist beliefs. This blasphemy died by the end of the 20th century. Some neo-Nazi groups -- largely in the U.S. -- are now attempting to continue this activity. This is in no way related to the restoration of Asatru as a legitimate religion. Asatru has a very strong anti-racist, anti-Nazi stance among national Asatru groups in the U.S. This is also found in almost all Asatru groups in English speaking countries. There is a clear rejection of racism written into their constitutions. Unfortunately, the Southern Poverty Law Center and the Federal Bureau of Investigation have mistakenly accused the entire religion of racism.

Many people are exposed to the name "Asatru" through role playing games.

Ascension. Unfortunately, the Asatru of these games bear little resemblance

Asatru Beliefs:

Asatru is a polytheistic religion. There are three races of Deities in the religion, regarded as living beings who are involved in human life: The Aesir: The Asenar or clan, representing Kingship, order, craft, etc.

The Vanir: These represent the fertility of the earth and forces of nature, but not the clan but are not part of it.

The Jotnar: These are giants who are in a constant state of war with the Gods, representing chaos and destruction. At the battle of Ragnar  k, many of the Gods will die to an end and be reborn.

Specific Gods: Some of the more important are: Thor is the Thunderer, God of the divine Hammer. His chariot racing across the sky generates thunder. Thor is named after him.

Odin is the one-eyed God; he gave up one of his eyes in order to drink from the Well of Mimir. He is a magician and wise one. He learned the secrets of the runes (Norse) by hanging himself on the tree Yggdrasil for nine nights.

Frey is the God of Yule (born on the Winter Solstice, typically December 21st) and plenty who brings fertility and prosperity. His father was Njord.

Specific Goddesses: Some important ones are: Freya (aka Freyja) is the Goddess of love and sexuality, and perhaps a dozen other attributes. She leads the Valkyries who slay soldiers to Valhalla (Odin's great hall).

Frigg is Odin's wife. Her name has been secularized to a slang term which means intercourse. She is the patroness of the household and of married women.

Skadi is the Goddess of independence, death, hunting and skiing. Scandal, shadow, the English words shadow, skullduggery and shade came from her name.

Ostara, is a Goddess of fertility who is celebrated at the time of the Spring Equinox by the Saxons as Eostre, the Goddess of Spring, from whom we have derived Easter. Ostara's symbols are the hare and the egg.

Other Entities Other Deities are Aegir, Balder, Bragi, Forseti, Heimdall, Hugin, and Vithar. They also honor the Landvaettir (land spirits) of the forest, earth, and sea.

Life Values: They follow the Nine Noble Virtues: Courage, Truth, Honor, Hospitality, Industriousness, Self-Reliance and Perseverance. The family is highly honored. They reject any form of discrimination based on ethnicity, gender, race, sexual orientation, or "other divisive criteria".

Origins: Humanity is literally descended from the Gods. Three brothers, Ask and Embla, people from two trees and gave them the names Ask and Embla. One deity, Odin, established the social classes.

Od: This is the gift of ecstasy provided to humans by the Gods. It is what separates humans from other animals, and is our eternal link with the Gods.

Creation Story: A poem Volusp   (Prophecy of the Seeress) contains an account of the universe. Between Muspelheim (The Land of Fire) and Niflheim the land of ice is the space called Ginnungigap. The fire and ice moved towards each other; when they met, the universe came into being. Odin, Vili and Ve later created the world from the had slain.

After death: Those who die in battle will be carried to Valhalla by the V Särimner (a pig that is daily slaughtered and resurrected) with the Gods. evil and treacherous lives go to Hifhel, a place of torment. The remainder calmness and peace, and is unrelated to the Christian Hell.

Asatru Rituals and Practices:

Their local religious communities are called Kindreds, Hearths, or Garths. priestesses are Gythia

The Blot: (pronounced "bloats") This is their most common religious ritual. Gods. In olden days, as with almost all ancient religions, an animal was and then slaughtered. This was not seen as a bribe or as a method of carrying a dying animal. It is simply the way in which the ancient Norse shared their food with the Gods. Currently, the animal sacrifice has been replaced by the offer of beer. Afterwards, those present are either sprinkled with the liquid, or drink it themselves.

The Sumbel: This is a ritual drinking celebration, in which a horn filled with mead is passed around the group. Each person delivers a greeting; a toast to the Gods, ancient history, or a story, song or poem. He or she then drinks from the horn.

Profession or Adoption: This is the act of making a commitment to Asatru faiths, by solemnly giving an oath of allegiance and kinship to the Gods. Vanir. It is a simple ceremony usually done in the presence of a Gothi or a Kindred, Hearth or Garth. It is taken on an oath ring or some other sacred object.

Seasonal Days of Celebration

In common with most Neo-Pagan faiths, their main holy days are:

Summer Finding, at the spring equinox, typically March 21. This is dedicated to Freya.

Winter Finding, at the fall equinox, typically September 21

Midsummer, at the summer solstice, typically June 21

Yule, which starts on the winter solstice (typically December 21) on the 12th and lasts for 12 days or more. This is the most important day of the year. Many Norse traditions are absorbed by the Christian celebration of Christmas: evergreen trees, Yule log, etc.

Many also celebrate days between the solstices and equinoxes. Various traditions observe them on different dates:

The Charming of the Plow on February 1st weekend, a celebration of Freya.
Merry-Moon on May 1st weekend, celebration of spring dedicated to Njord.
Harvest or Freyfaxi on August 1st weekend, the first harvest and celebration of Frey.
Fogmoon on November 1st weekend, a celebration of war-dead and Ragnarok.
Odin and Freya.

Einherjar is held on November 11 and coincides with Armistice or Veterans Day. Those who have been killed in battle and have joined Odin's warriors in Valhalla are honored on the 9th of each month to honor Norse heroes. Other groups hold rituals for the dead.

days are celebrated at other times during the year by different traditions
