I just opened the door, looked outside and saw two birds frolicking in mid-air. Then they flew off so gracefully, piercing the blue morning sky with a shimmer of magnificent splendor and awe inspiring thoughts of their evolution gladdened by their brown elegance.

The sky is wonderful right now, beautiful shades of baby blue fade into a lavender and a very light pinkish orange, with a palm tree interrupting a path that intersect my view with another glance of brilliance and a subtle gesture that hover weightless with an elaborate pink/white glow. Their fluffy white mass fills the mind with a taste of sweetness surrounded on each side with a wafer of memory with the melted leftover of what was once a Hershey's bar. MMM, vision of imagination flows... it's the only way to be... you.
