Zan,

I came across as a preacher. The cross step I told you about...? Did I go step on your toes? It will happen. I am not so sorry. I am equal to you in subordination. You would have it no other way. A stool can not be balanced

So that was the trigger then? I am not Auntie! Now I am offended! Shall I be preaching from here forward. Some days I want to tape your mouth shut to Do I? I think about it...I let it pass. Do you prefer I call you on each occasion

Perhaps you are correct, filled with passion I was taking for granted having practitioners around to practice with. It took a long time to develop our culture, yet we did it! They told us it couldn't be done in Omaha, yet we did

Zan when we are doubted in our quest and they say we can't do it, do we can be done. We have both proved otherwise in numerous other opportunities someone has got in our face and said it just couldn't be done and we proved doing it again one post and person at a time! Adversity, preaching again makes me stronger, not worn down!

Do you remember my dream the other day?

Life always finds a way...an inner way. Sees things from other perspectives

Do you understand it was not out of pride or ego I wrote this piece the way of a need to be right or to even teach, rather it was informative and simple as basic and neutral as possible. It could have been much more than it was. Yet, I did not choose in error. Why it could apply to just about any culture speak from my own experience was all I did. I am not even a shaman, I realize do I not?

I do not take back my personal integrity by saying I am sorry for what I wrote honor your own voice and appreciate your feedback.

Thank you for recognizing the inner path is the key to learning. Did I not talk about the way.

Something to agree on none the less. I see the inner way in many paragraphs perhaps more than you.

Namaste'
