A trick! A treat!

The wiles of a women I suppose...Oh brother.
You just love to push my buttons...

I have some quotes: everyone has a hero...mine is Mother Teresa.

She said:

Love each other as God loves each of you, with such an intense and part

Be kind to each other. It is better to committ faults with gentleness than unkindness.

HMMMMM? Pondering, R U?

From the autobiography of Mother Teresa, No Greater Love, a newly revised LaVonne Neff.

Are we not reflecting each other whenever our eyes meet the eyes of ano

Do we not see reflection in the waters as we stroll along the lake?

When we look up into the glass of a window pane in a shopkeepers window reflection?

Obviously their is much to ponder about reflection all by itself for God h opportunities to see our own and others, as well.

I see love in everything...different kinds you say...no all Gods creations love.

I see it in your eyes, in the trees, in the lake and in the animals too. I s potential destruction and in the rainbow that follows. I see it in the newb soul. I see love in the blossoming flower as its petals open and all abloo of attention and care, the soil tended just so, the seeds planted for life wherever the winds may blow or the waters may rain down to nourish this Love is not only about loving those we procreate. Procreation stops long middle of our lifetimes now. With birth control so readily available and fa be a child or two that is offered to this world of ours. The love of these the love changes over the passing of days and nights. As a mother of man procreation comes in the letting go of God's creation once more to allow God intended for them to be, independent loving beings manifesting their There is a time to hold them and suckle them close and a time to set the time to let them fly off on their own and to grow knowing your love has g more to follow...
