If God is one; every person sees their own perspective reflection of God.

The ways of nature are created by God..

If we look at picture long enough, you start to understand the artist, the creation..

So if enough people all said their beliefs about God, then we would start a global picture...

From that understanding, we would then all start to see common themes in

From there we could have more of a clue, to why we are here...

It's OK for someone to say all his belief's, yet someone on the other side a slightly different view...

So slowly belief's change as we learn, as we can see from history; even religions they change over time, to become more full.....

So as one people we can answer this question, as God is one and we are religion...

God is of spirit and those of spirit God knows...

so if you feel you can enlighten on this subject of the meaning of life... please say, as the more people there are, the more answers we can find.
