Freewill

Freewill is not a single option.

We do not choose our point of origin, gender or general appearance. Nor abnormalities or psychological strengths and weaknesses.

We do not opt for natural disasters or control regional weather patterns. economic conditions, social norms and values or the system of government forefathers.

We do not choose the lessons taught by our elders, the degree of negativity which we are raised. We are determined biologically, environmentally, social thoughts and actions of those who have lived before us and by the thoughts who live today. We are determined by our own ignorance to choose from what we are aware of.

At the same time we are free. We enjoy freedoms that reflect tastes and preferences. We are free to the degree of awareness of the factors that influence our lives. We are free to wage war, to ignore those in need, to disregard the feelings of others. We are free to choose right from wrong, to pursue our own selfish desires, to act on a large scale. Some of us even feel free enough to summon and pass judgment on the existence possible. But, not without consequences.

True freedom stems from integrity and coming to terms with that which is beyond our control which touches our hearts. True freedom comes from understanding and experiencing. True freedom is bestowed on the basis of one's point of origin and or financial peace. The real question is, do we want to be free or do we want to be loved, love, or a world without. Which of the two is greater?
