Plato said: " We don't learn, we remember". WE are souls. We have recorded all our experiences. This is how people can do regressions, it is just about remembering your past life.. on the same token we can see the future too, even though it is hard to see. We have consciousness in something that we will experience rather than something that has already been experienced. Because time is cyclical, I will exist again in the next cycle. All our experiences are recorded and because history and geography repeats itself, I will be aware of a particular "scene" I will act accordingly. It is like playing a 4000 year old tune. I play the tune recorded in me.

To probe this, look, what I am writing right now. I would lie to you if I tell you that I am not for word what I am writing... it just comes naturally, even without me thinking about it. Once I am aware of the task, the needle moves and I play the tune... In the end, I am on accepting 2 things: Time is predestined and repetitive and the fact that all our "decisions" are based on previous experiences (law of Karma) I will be "predestined" my way... 99% of our choices are not rational... and out of the 1% , 50% of them are wrong... the other 0.5% it was predestined to happen . We cannot control the universe, a variable that moves the universe.. it is arrogance to believe that we can control the drama of life , it will happen... otherwise it will not. We are like actors playing a unique role. when we get attached to this role, we suffer. We need to remember our true nature. Souls having a bodily experience.. and expressing our roles.
