Mysticism from the Greek mystikós (of the Eleusinian Mysteries, mysteria) meaning "initiation"[1]) is the pursuit of achieving communion, awareness of, ultimate reality, the divine, spiritual truth, or God through insight; and the belief that such experience is an important source of knowledge and wisdom. Traditions may include a belief in the literal existence of realities beyond ordinary perception, or a belief that a true human perception of the world transcends intellectual comprehension. A person delving in these areas may be called a mystic.

Well on having been to heaven at 23, having so many coincidence all my life. Didn't read the Bible until 24 (then only as murder mystery) as i knew as a child with in the new testament...

Having read most books before then and being able to ask for miracles as a child...i would say that is very mystical....

Yet clearly on the site it doesn't even have its own label and name....so it just causes unhappiness.

We are one us, everyone is mystical and that is what this site is here for people's understandings of the meta physical and not so much the physical.
