More things to think about:

"ok. Well, christians believe that you have to be born again. That means the flesh and then once we have knowledge of Christ we are accountable doesn't have the chance to have knowledge is therefor exempt from this before or after birth then then go straight to heaven to the arms of God."

Catholics are Christians and they don't believe in rebirth. This demonstrates there is conflict of "belief." Any group can believe anything they want even that "the word of God."

That is a defamation of God and a defamation of intelligence, reasoning, consistent throughout.

"I also must object to you saying that God never took human flesh. Jesus is 100% God and 100% man in that His bloodline and spirit came from God through a woman and took on flesh. YOU don't believe that and that is your choice."

It is a matter of simple reasoning. Why God himself needs to experience pain? Why does God need to be punished? That is not reasonable. To talk about "bloodline of a soul" or "bloodline of a soul"? Moreover to say that God is sending himself to pay for Adam and Eve it is as irrational as saying that He is sending his own son...besides every human being has sinned from the beginning everyone is a "sinner"? for a price was paid?.. and then God sends his son or "part" of himself to "pay" this debt... much...

Jesus gave teachings and these teachings have been misinterpreted....2000 years ago even worse than before (even though the "debt" has been paid.)

It is time to see this with fresh new eyes.
