When the natural desire of all normal persons is to live at peace, why is hate and make a practice of killing one another? It truly is a paradox

The Encyclopoedia Britannica (1966), under the heading "Devil," observe Protestantism tends to deny the necessity of belief in a personal devil, p biblical and other references to him as to personification of the principle to believe in an "animal part of human nature," or a "principle of evil," r Thus, the once-common understanding that the Devil is a living, unseen p seriously by many. Even today the Devil is traditionally conceived as a c uniform, having horns, a tail, and a pitchfork in his hand.

do not be duped into accepting a purely materialistic view. the fact that there are unseen, invisible living creatures, and that these upon human affairs.

. "God is a Spirit," the Bible explains. (John 4:24) It also tells us that G (Heb. 1:7) These are real, living persons. So the Devil, too, is a spirit p

. He made all spirit creatures perfect. But one of these made a Devil out by his own improper desires. The Bible explains the process by which ev turn bad: "Each one is tried by being drawn out and enticed by his own d it has become fertile, gives birth to sin."-Jas. 1:14, 15.

The improper desire that this powerful spirit creature entertained was to creatures, which only the Creator, Jehovah God, deserves. He was able t serve him by misrepresenting to them what God had spoken about eating garden of Eden. He thus became a slanderer, or "Devil." He is also calle "dragon" and "original serpent." In time, even other spirit creatures joine God, and also became devils or demons.-Gen. 3:1-

God not immediately destroy the Devil and the human pair he had induce Jehovah God did not choose to do this. An issue had been raised by the question: Can the Devil succeed in turning all creatures away from God? allowed to bring forth offspring so that the integrity-keeping course of fa descendants would vindicate their Creator and prove the Devil a liar. So was set aside by God{6000 yrs} to settle this issue.-Job chapters 1 and 2

But are not the great traditional religions of the world different? Do they bulwark against any superhuman evil influence? On the contrary, the reli Christendom and pagandom have intimately associated themselves with th leaders. As "friendship with the world is enmity with God," these systems themselves to be false religions.-Jas. 4:4.

The Bible describes the world empire of false religion, called "Babylon th woman "with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication, whereas were made drunk with the wine of her fornication."-Rev. 17:2, 5.

Have not the world's religions blessed the nations and prayed for the tro

Christians would keep separate from the world, even as he did.-John 17:

Supposedly Christian religions have been involved in fiendish inquisition and savage wars. Whose influence is manifested by such actions-that of Jesus or his followers to love one another, or that of the Devil? What about religious faith in the written Word of Jehovah God by claiming that it is filled with lies? Who go so far as to say that God is dead? Is this not the sort of thing to do to the world," who is a constant slanderer of man's Creator?

That the Devil would, as the master of deception, mislead people by religion to serve the true God was foretold in the Bible at 2 Corinthians 11:13-15, where they are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Satan. It is a wonder, for Satan himself keeps transforming himself into an angel of light. How great if his ministers also keep transforming themselves into ministers of righteousness. If, for example, there is no Devil, how can you reconcile the existence of evil with the continuing existence of evil? As Howard R. Burkle writes in God, Suffering and Evil: "The factors which make belief [in God] difficult for moderns, however, are the problems of suffering." Denying the existence of the Devil might therefore be one breeding ground for the non-existence of God!
