Thanks for the info!!

Relax, Shalom Bro

Namaste

Ok then I was wrong in saying Quarks then, I thought they had seen it was Quarks were.

So we need a name for these lines, as this is what I saw when I died. I did though as from some of the sites I found, they are having trouble making completely.

The universe from a spiritual realm perspective was made up of these lines. The lower levels are dense lines and straight without much energy. The higher levels that have Transcended the normal state of reality and contain Immense energy Characteristics.

In doing so finding rest, in a state of perfection being free to float and move through the levels of these lines.

These within the higher realms learn from other lines. They have become information and love contained within these strands.

Ok so that is what I meant before, please ask, if doesn't make sense in a way that I mean.

Back to the question of the thread.

Now if you can imagine what I am describing what caused these lines to form their structure.

If you imagine with out any set order in which to interact, the universe would be chaos, with all these lines muddled.

Yet where did the lines come from?

Imagine there was nothing and that there was just space without any form or nothingness

Then something within either of these, wished to exist, so then appeared. It would have taken Immense wishing to exist, how I do not know.

Then at first there was just one strand and this wished to know what it was. So it made a reflection of its self, to see its self, the same as cells forming.

From this point it made reflection, after reflection till this very center that is what we now call God.

From there it created out side of this, if you know about the dream walked created by speech and made the landscape.

Now I know from a scientific background this is not easy to take in, it has started to comprehend it.

Yet atoms and elements are only a part of the bigger picture as they are

Science is only theory and by experiments, how can we experiment on something we can hardly even see it, when we try.

As for scientific theory it has many things that defy their own principles

Atoms join one way or another, according to science, yet water joins both. Plus water is 2 gases, why would 2 gases form to make a liquid?

The problem within all of this is what causes them to hold form, what to interact and why do they contain structure and ways to interact?

This is what I am trying to explain, the big things are made up of the small

The universe isn't purely as we see it and a big bang created all this, as it is and on a smaller level this has many flaws. As this would make no logical sense could this structure, come in to being, even with millions of years and a cause it to be dynamic and interact as it does.

Can you see what I mean?

Peace N love B with U
