You said: " the Universe proves to be supplied with the most suitable design for human life. To think that the universe has been designed for "human life" is understandable from the perspective of a human being. This statement is clearly biased.

The universe wasn't designed "by chance." Chance is just our acknowledgment of the cause of something is. It is a label. There is no randomness in the universe.

To "create" something from "nothingness" is not consistent with scientific knowledge. As a matter of fact, there is no such a thing as "nothingness." Therefore, any "evidence" must comply with this. Otherwise, it is just a matter of belief. In your website you are assuming many things, for instance: "To say that something was created from nothing is tantamount to saying that it is "nothing". The whole universe was created from nothing. This is not true. Space has "0" volume; however, we know it exists. It is not empty. Because we cannot use our senses to measure something, it doesn't mean it doesn't exist.

The "big-bang" cannot explain what was there before the "explosion." and why. Everything has a cause, what is the cause of "nothing."? "Nothing" is not a thing. It is above. The 3 aspects of time must be present at all times and be consistent. Cosmologists are still "improving" their theories as to how the universe came to be. The biggest obstacle is to get to a "unified" theory. Relativity and quantum physics are the best we have yet, without this there cannot be a "true explanation" but just a "best theory".

However, reasoning, logic, has been able to give us answers. It is not logical or reasonable to "create" something from "nothing." "matter" cannot be destroyed, it can only be transformed.

Besides, if this was true; it will represent quite a bit of philosophical problems. If God created the universe, and He created something good, why he allowed evil? why is there evil? The answer is: because we have free will. If this was the case, why cannot we be punished? Why God has to interfere? Besides, it is logical to assume that if God created the universe and He created everything, He cannot change anything. He is bound by his own creation. "created" everything from the beginning...therefore, He cannot change anything that was going to happen... Logic and reasoning alone can give us answers. God does not deal with matter. God is a soul, just like you and me. We have a spiritual experience, a material experience.

"Holy books" were written 1500 - 2000 years ago. They were written by humans with the understanding they had at that time. Since then, many things have changed.
