THE UNPRECEDENTED DIMMING OF BETELGEUSE: Astronomers from Villanova University reported this week that Betelgeuse has continued to dim. The red supergiant's l 25 year low, stoking speculation that the star is about to explode. Other explanations are at least as likely. Betelgeuse might be blowing dust from its cool out that dims its own light. Whatever is happening, the researchers, " Betelgeuse should be closely watched."
