I just wanted to add a recent experience I just had. I went to sign in with my account and found I was banned. I was taken by complete surprise! I was in tears because I had done nothing to offend. I couldn't even contact the moderator. I was lucky I had recently communicated with one of the members. She asked for my name. Apparently, I offended them because I sent a link to a Christian site that I thought that to me, should be seen by all people, of all races and religions. It is important that anyone is interested, <https://www.thinkingwithgod.com/home.html>

When I saw it, it moved me to tears. I thought, this is what it should be.

Apparently one moderator did not agree. So ultimately, we are all human. No matter what religion you say you are with, there will be people who are not open-minded.

Wizanda recently sent me something that I think will be my response for the question "what is your religion?.....I replied my religion is kindness"
