I have a picture of my daughter in her crib when she was about 4 months old and pointed ears instantly made us think of an elf. (Not knowing about fairies)

She is the joy of my life, as well as my life challenge. I have brought her up because so many in authority can be wrong. I was taught not to question authority, health as well as my family. She has the insight to see inconsistencies from her all the time.

At the age of 12, she has a natural beauty that people pay big bucks to imitate. Lips, rosy cheeks, hair that is straight, but with body, and sparkling eyes. She is slowly realizing what she has, and what other people do to get her.

She also has always had a very strong attraction to trees, as well as other plants. Her front yard is her friend, that she has always communicated with.

We love our faerie, (her preferred spelling) very much.
