I do follow most principles of Islam, yet I wouldn't say I follow all of it. You see I follow Oneness (heaven), which is what I saw when I died at 23. The main part is that, being an angel, I would never prostrate my self to God alone!

Even if man had come up with earthly names for creatures only Allah is v. This is tricky to explain and I don't wish for you to misunderstand me, yet books as at 15, God and the whole of heaven spoke to me and ask that I. I have done this, yet only as proof reading my views have never changed heaven since I was born.

This has helped understanding the truth of Christ, as I remember him also he has been portrayed is not him.

Also if I do try and change I get guided into the path I must take, this has read something Allah doesn't want me to, I get a headache.

I am Muslim, yet to deny that all religions have something to learn is limiting. Which is why I say my religion is Oneness, as I don't have a label. I am religion is a way of controlling people (as the word means).

My spirit is Allah's not mans and so therefore I don't follow mans rules, I hope that makes sense, if not ask
